

Matt Wagner is a passionate product leader who relentlessly pushes for the success of the products he owns. By leveraging strong partnerships with those around him, he connects with the needs of the customer to continuously deliver value. His belief is that the user experience can always be improved through solid execution and thoughtful evolution.

Matt has worked in the telecommunications industry for 12 years starting with Sand Cherry Associates in 2012 before moving over to Spectrum in 2015. In his current role as a Senior Director of Video Experience with Spectrum's Connectivity & Entertainment organization Matt and his team are responsible for: Spectrum's continued Xumo Stream Box deployment; setting and executing the strategy for delivering content in new and competitive ways; and ushering in a new era of additional streaming app partners.

In 2017, Matt won a Spectrum Superstars award for outstanding achievement and in 2024 he was selected for the Forever Forward award that was given to the top performers in Spectrum's Product & Technology organization.

Matt's life outside of work is dedicated to the ones he loves. His wife and two young daughters are the most important part of his life and his primary goal at home is to be the most loving and supportive partner to all three of those beautiful human beings.
